

UNDERSTANDING NEEDS

- There are over 1,100 international teachers from 34 different countries working in South Carolina schools each year.
- Five private companies serve as Visa sponsors and provide two weeks of orientation upon arrival.
- Teachers arrive with 2 suitcases and about $1500 to begin a new life, including deposits on apartments, furnishing an apartment, securing transportation and preparing a classroom.
- Teachers who can afford airfare may bring their spouses and children to come and live in SC after they get settled.
- Others leave families behind and send money "home" to support them.
- Transportation is a great challenge to most teachers. Many walk, bicycle, ride the bus or pay for Uber rides.
- The majority of teachers come from warm climates. Their bodies are not acclimated to cold temperatures, and they do not have the warm clothes and shoes needed for winter seasons.
- These teachers seldom ask for help but may not have essentials such as a bed to sleep on.
- There is a great desire for fellowship with one another and others in the community, but these teachers are often isolated, especially during Covid.

International teachers come to our country with only two suitcases and limited funds.

WAYS TO SERVE

- Are there international teachers at your local school or in your district? Get to know the teacher; encourage them; create a relationship with them.
- Befriend teachers when they enter the country. Greet them with a welcome basket: towels, pillows, cleaning supplies, gift cards to local restaurants, grocery stores or places to purchase supplies.
- Help teachers navigate a new city and a new culture.
- Offer transportation as they are learning to get around.
- Help furnish an apartment. Sometimes this is as simple as a Facebook post asking our friends if they have items to donate.
- Invite teachers to join you and your family for fellowship.
- Consider having your small group or Sunday School class sponsor a teacher for a year.
- Include teachers in special celebrations like Thanksgiving and Christmas.
- Work with the district to identify the teachers in your area and provide opportunities for them to gather for fellowship.
